1. Introduction

To talk about the program is to talk about the goals, aspirations, demands and imaginary of workers to improve current conditions and in the near future.

The program can not refer to something static, but dynamic therefore operates to historical and political transitions.

2- Development

The program defines the program goals. This program would be temporary, for the moment, but projecting a vision for the future. The transition program refers to the struggle for workers' immediate interests of the world related to the historic objectives as a class.

The program can not refer only to trade union interests but to all sectors of society and exploited sectors so that, in strategic alliance can go on to the social transformation that involves profound changes in economic, political, social and cultural.

This program would not be once and forever, must be reviewed and updated regularly, by previous reforms proposed by the World Trade Union Congress itself.

At this time, it is convenient to clarify the main aims of the proletarian struggle worldwide since the program is a basic reference for action, the common flags, and express the explanation to the question "¿Why we fight?".

The program is complemented by the Action Plan agreed by the World Trade Union Congress. This Plan expresses the specific mechanisms and actions for concrete the Program to be specific in its current phase.
